Telling the full complex human history associated with the historic house is the mission of the Museum.

This history includes the Indigenous people who lived here for millennia before Europeans arrived, English colonists like William Trent, loyal citizens of the British crown and patriots fighting for independence, wealthy families of the Gilded Age and their servants, and European immigrants and African American migrants from the south who worked in the factories and lived in the neighborhoods surrounding the property.

The Museum is making history today by telling these stories and connecting them to the history of our community, state, and nation.

You can add to these stories by donating an inscribed legacy brick commemorating an important person or event in your own life or honoring the achievements and contributions of a person or organization.

Legacy bricks are available in three sizes and can be inscribed with text up to 20 characters per line, including spaces and punctuation. Please indicate the size and number of bricks you wish to donate and complete the next page with inscription information. If you order multiple bricks, please use a separate form for each brick's inscription.
